

FRECKLE-FACE

See and Wind Bring Out Ugly Spots. How to Remove Easily.

Here's a chance, Miss Freckle-face, to try a remedy for freckles with the guarantee of a reliable dealer that it will not cost you a penny unless it removes the freckles, while if it does give you a clear complexion the expense is trifling.

Simply get an ounce of ointment—double strength—from any druggist and a few applications should show you how easy it is to rid yourself of the homely freckles and get a beautiful complexion. Barely more than one ounce needed for the worst case.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength ointment, as this is the prescription sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.—Advt.

KISSES REWARD
MODEST HERO WHO SAVED HIS SISTER

Boy Toted Girl to Hospital on Back When She Was Bleeding to Death.

Shucks! Johnny Befuhs a hero?

BOY HERO AND SISTER
HE CARRIED ON BACK TO THE HOSPITAL.

Not much! He ain't the kind of a kid to brag about things and the least said is soonest mended. That's why the twelve-year-old youngster was made and named all at once to-day when the girls and women folks surrounded him just as soon as he left his home at No. 49 Columbia Street, Brooklyn, and began kissing him and smoothing his hair.

Madeline Befuhs, her sister Loretta, ten years old, and Mazie Winters, also ten, all of whom go to St. Peter's Church, wandered down to a dock at Amity Street and East River. There Madeline took off her shoes and stockings and shortly afterward stepped on a large piece of glass, cutting a gash more than half an inch deep in her foot.

There weren't any grown-ups near. Mazie and Loretta knew it was a very serious situation, and they carried Madeline to her home, only a short distance away. A crowd gathered. Everyone was distracted. No one knew just what to do till Johnnie came running up.

"Call an ambulance," implored the hysterical Mrs. Befuhs.

"Keep cool, ma," the little fellow said. "In school teacher said never to get excited. Now, I won't call an ambulance 'cause sometimes they're slow. I'll carry Madeline to the hospital." Thereupon he yanked a handkerchief from his pocket, wound it about his sister's foot as a tourniquet, hoisted her onto his back and then set off for the hospital, while the women and girls of the neighborhood followed him.

The little fellow made the trip in fifteen minutes. Thoroughly exhausted, he staggered into the hospital office with his burden. Dr. Bernstein quickly stopped the flow of blood.

CHILDREN'S COURT
OPENS NEW HOME
FOR DELINQUENTS

Structure Is Called "Palace of Optimism" by Friend of Little Ones.

"The Palace of Optimism," as Ernest K. Coulter, superintendent of the New York Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, has named the Children's Court, opened to-day the doors of its magnificent new building on Twenty-second Street, between Lexington and Third Avenues. Mr. Coulter, together with Justice Franklin C. Hoyt, who presides over the Children's Court, has been striving to interest the city in this movement since 1904, two years after New York's first Children's Court opened.

Judge Willard H. Olmstead was the presiding justice when the old court, at No. 66 Third Avenue, held its first trial, and the conditions there were frightful. President McAnany of the Board of Aldermen and Mayor Mitchell, then Commissioner of Accounts, became interested and assisted in securing the new building, which cost $240,000.

While the new Children's Court building is a small structure compared to other municipal buildings, it is to be the home of one of the most important departments of New York City. The fourth floor of the building has been given over to a rest room where the mothers with their children may lounge while awaiting the trial of some child, and the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children has installed an icebox containing milk for the youngsters. Toys and tiny chairs have also been placed there for the children. Three doctors and several nurses have offices on the floor.

On the floor below are the detention rooms—one for girl offenders and another for boys. This morning there were but two girls, while the boys totaled fifteen.

On the second floor is the court, from which curious spectators are barred, where the kindly Justice Hoyt talks with the juvenile delinquents, for in this court there are no such things as "crimes" and "criminals." Every one is a "delinquent" awaiting a hearing for some offense. The waiting and complaint rooms and the chambers of the Justice take up the rest of this floor.

In opening the first session this morning, Justice Hoyt said: "I want to express, on behalf of the Court, our gratification at being able to use this building. For this privilege we owe thanks to the President of the Borough of Manhattan and to the Superintendent of Public Buildings and the architects who have done so much for us."

"But this occupancy is not the formal opening of the building. There is still a great deal to be done and it will be some time before every detail can be worked out. Then it is planned formally to dedicate the building and that occasion will be marked by appropriate observances."

The first "culprit" was a strapping red-headed boy of fourteen years, who admitted tearfully he had stolen a pocketbook containing 50 cents from a young girl, because, he said cheekily, he had been robbed of a purse holding $2.86, and wanted to get as much from some one else. He was very repentant and the Justice decided to give him another hearing before passing sentence.

At present this court has to handle all the children's cases of Manhattan and the Bronx, but by the first of January another society is to be formed in connection with the Gerry Society and a Bronx Children's Court building erected.

12-CAR TRAINS
ON LONG ISLAND
VIOLATE RULES

Public Service Order Defied and Passengers Forced to Open the Doors.

In direct violation of the order of the Public Service Commission that all trains with electricity as motive power shall have a guard at each train opening, the Long Island Railroad Company is operating trains from the Pennsylvania station with but three men. To-day in the height of the rush of returning week-enders at shore resorts, one twelve-car train, No. 1009, from Rockaway Park, rolled into the station with but three men in the crew, and the passengers were held in the cars until they learned to operate the mechanism of the gates and let themselves out.

At the way stations on the trip into the city passengers rushed from car to car looking for an open door. Although the company claims the three men are a conductor and a rear and forward trainman, the two trainmen were seldom at the train ends, but were going through the cars collecting tickets. They opened a door wherever they happened to be.

Passengers attempting to board the train in some instances climbed up between the two cars and worked at the levers controlling the doors. The trainmen, in violation of another Public Service order, opened some of the doors while the train was still in motion entering the stations, and closed them after the train had again started.

At the offices of the Public Service Commission it was stated that many complaints had been received and were being investigated. An inspection of the records showed that since Dec. 30, 1911, when President Peters wrote a letter to Chairman Edward E. McCall, asking for a modification of the order, nothing has been done to enforce the penalties for violations.

After many warnings the Commission notified the railroad that suit was to be commenced for $25,000 in penalties. The suit was started and Mr. Peters then wrote Chairman McCall and said he thought the desired results could be brought about without subjecting the company "to fines for violations that may occur in the letter of a strict order that cannot possibly produce any better results."

The records of the Commission do not show any further action in the matter, but Jacob H. Goetz, assistant counsel, said he understood that following this the suit was held up pending an adjustment of the matter. He said he understood the Transit Bureau had settled the questions involved in the suit, but Edward D. Hutchinson, inspector in the Transit Bureau, who has been in charge of the affair, said he knew of no settlement. On the contrary, he admitted that a report of many violations of the order had been made to the Commission.

The order has been violated steadily for several weeks, and every morning the same scenes are enacted of men trying to climb between cars to open doors.
